The Sales & Marketing Management MBA

INTRODUCTION

- This Sales & Marketing Management MBA training course enables participants to identify customer needs, create products and services to satisfy these needs, determine which stakeholders the organisation can best serve, and design programmes to inform and build relationships with these stakeholders.
- The participants will be able to advise on and lead customer satisfaction, new product development, product and service management, innovative selling, and service. They will see their business through their client or customer's eyes and make decisions that have a positive impact on finances and reputation.

This training course will highlight:

- The major decisions marketing and sales leaders face in matching their organisation's resources with marketplace realities
- Current issues in marketing and sales management and frameworks for responding effectively to them
- Best practices, concepts, tools and techniques for managing marketing and sales activities
- Applying marketing and sales theories to the real-world issues delegates face including balancing demand and supply, understanding and responding to buyer behaviours, and relationship building
- Verbal and non-verbal skills for managing teams for peak performance

OBJECTIVES

By the end of this training course, participants will be able to:

- Align sales and marketing Initiatives within the organisation
- Develop sales and marketing strategies and programmes to build competitive advantage
- Improve the sales recruiting, interviewing, and hiring process
- Integrate social media marketing with traditional marketing activities
- Use the marketing mix to increase business development opportunities
- Adjust their marketing, communication and selling styles to that of people from other cultures

TRAINING METHODOLOGY

- This Sales & Marketing Management MBA training course combines presentations that share both theory and industry best practices with practical sessions in accordance with adult learning and blended learner-centred principles. The participants will have opportunities to put into practice the skills they develop and enhance during the course. We make the most of small and whole group exercises, videos, case studies, peer exchange, brainstorming, role plays and discussions, and spending time working one-on-one and in small groups to resolve the challenges participants face. They will leave with new ideas and skills they can implement immediately; they step back into their teams.
